Language Builder

Explain more details about the use of prepositions of location.

in the airport = inside the building

at the airport = in the vicinity of the airport, either in the buildings or just outside, for example in the parking lot on the corner = a location that is a permanent situation (For example: The bus stop is on the corner.)

at the corner = a location that is a temporary situation (For example: The bus is at the corner now.)

Language Builder

Point out that we can also describe the location of the English School by saying that it is over or above the supermarket.

Teaching Tip

Have students keep either a separate notebook or section of a notebook for a “personal dictionary.” Then when you introduce new words that are not in the book, they write them in their personal dictionaries. Encourage them to use pictures and examples to illustrate the words when possible, rather than translations.

Additional Activity

Have students work in pairs to draw a map of an interesting neighborhood in their city or town. They should draw in places of interest on the map such as stores, restaurants, etc. Then they work with another pair and describe the neighborhood using prepositions.

- According to a recent study, more people get lost in London than anywhere else in the world. The top four cities for getting lost were found to be 1. London; 2. Paris; 3. Hong Kong; and 4. Beijing.
- One in four people say that they depend completely on online maps or mobile satellite navigation to find their way while driving.
