Language Builder

If students ask, point out that have to and has to are similar in meaning to must, but must is less common in American English. Make sure they understand that don't/doesn't have to means something isn't necessary, but mustn't means that it is prohibited. Past obligation is expressed with had to.

Teaching Tip

The grammar charts can be useful reference tools for students. Tell students to review them periodically and mark the points they need to study more.

Additional Activity

In groups, have students make suggestions to do something. One student declines and makes an excuse. The rest of the group guesses if the excuse is made up or real.

The first Ferris wheel was built for the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. It was over 260 feet (80m) tall, carried 2,160 people, and was powered by two steam engines.
